Robinson Helicopter Launches New Website

Torrance, CA — Robinson, producer of the world's two most popular civil helicopters, has announced today the successful launching of a new website www.robinsonheli.com. The new site allows visitors to view product data including performance, specifications, and pricing for all R22 and R44 configurations, with an email link to request additional information.

Flight instructors and maintenance technicians who want to attend Robinson's training courses may obtain a description of the courses, schedule of course dates/availability, a registration form to attend, and even a list of local hotels near Robinson's southern California factory.

A list of Robinson's 200+ dealers and service centers is provided with each company's telephone, fax, email and website. For those who are interested in employment, the site now has a listing of current job openings, an employment application form, and a link to submit a resume by e-mail. There is also a "News" page with links to the company's latest Newsletters and recent press releases. This site implements the use of Flash vector animation and was designed by Skip Olsson Graphics, www.skipolsson.com.
